WASHINGTON LEADERSHIP BOARD
Blake Lawson
Seneca was founded in 1985 from a belief that all youth are capable of success, belonging, and happiness when provided supports that are responsive to their unique needs and experiences. Starting as a small residential and day treatment program for the Bay Area’s most struggling youth, we aimed to address the failure of public systems to adequately meet the needs of youth impacted by profound trauma, loss, and disability. Far too often these youth were ending up isolated from their families, peers, and communities, being moved between treatment settings that lacked the capacity to help them heal and thrive. Our agency’s founding commitment of providing Unconditional Care – doing whatever it takes to support youth’s success without the option to give up– has driven our efforts for the last three decades.

From this foundation, Seneca has built a continuum of community and school-based services that contest the existing narrative about what is possible for youth facing the most significant challenges, including students with disabilities. Our commitment to this model has been developed into a highly articulated treatment approach that forms the basis of all Seneca programs. Unconditional Care: Relationship-Based, Behavioral Intervention with Vulnerable Children and Families (published in 2010 by Oxford Press) integrates attachment, learning, and systems theories and provides tools to assess and address youth’s complex relational, behavioral, and ecological needs. Seneca has learned from years of experience working with struggling youth how to reshape systems and supports that reach youth earlier, ultimately preventing further escalation. Our education, mental health, and permanency services are designed to be highly accessible and responsive to the needs and goals of each youth and family, reaching them in their homes, schools, and communities.
The mission of Seneca Family of Agencies is to help children and families through the most difficult times of their lives.
A decade ago, life changed for my husband Tyler and I thanks to Seneca’s Kinship Center. We reached out to Kinship Center because we wanted to grow our family through adoption, and that’s when we were introduced to the baby who is now our beautiful daughter.

There are so many children out there in the foster care system, moving from foster home to foster home, and it is heartbreaking. Tyler and I have always heard so many people talking about wanting to adopt, but never taking the step. That’s why we decided that we were going to stick with it: we were going to be this baby girl’s forever family.

The training and support that Kinship Center provides prepared us with the guidance, tools, and resources to care for our little girl like nothing else could have. Our social worker, Brianne, was always right there by our side, every step of the way. And when the adoption was finalized, that was not the end of our relationship with Kinship Center. The continued support we received post adoption provided the tools necessary to ensure the success of our new family.

Seneca’s Kinship Center is so much more than an adoption agency—it is a new chapter of your life; it is the catalyst that brought our daughter into our lives. For that we will be forever grateful because Tyler and I cannot imagine our lives without her. She is so full of joy and happiness, and we feel so blessed that she has brought that joy and happiness into our lives.
MENTAL HEALTH

CASEY’S STORY

Compassionate and bright, twelve-year-old Casey is in his element when socializing with friends and telling funny stories. Casey has been raised by a single caregiver, his grandfather, since the age of 6 when his parents lost custody rights. Historically, Casey has had difficulty building relationships and trusting adults due to his past trauma and feelings of abandonment. When he feels overwhelmed, Casey sometimes lashes out to feel in control. Aggression and destructive behavior, as well as work avoidance, have made it exceedingly difficult for him to thrive and feel successful.

Seneca’s therapeutic services over the past two years have focused on equipping Casey with tools to overcome these challenges. Casey and his mental health clinician have explored self-regulation skills that he can use when he becomes frustrated by a task or otherwise emotionally dysregulated. As he has honed his ability to recognize and put words to his emotions and needs, Casey’s communication with teachers and other adults at school has improved dramatically. His coping skills and trusting relationships with teachers have in turn significantly reduced the incidence of aggressive or destructive behaviors and increased his tolerance for challenging schoolwork.

Halfway through this past school year, Casey’s grandfather passed away. Casey and his grandfather had a very close relationship and shared many common interests, such as fixing old cars and fishing in the summertime. Since his grandfather’s passing, Casey has lived with his aunt and uncle, who temporarily moved to town to help him complete the school year. Through weekly one-on-one therapy and frequent family therapy, Casey is coming to terms with this tremendous loss and working to improve healthy family relationships at home.

Even in the midst of grief, Casey has found joy in connecting with and helping others. He has built strong ties with his peers at school, including acting as a mentor to younger students. Casey has also learned critical skills in advocating for his own needs and those of other students. Giving back to his school community in this way has been an unparalleled positive outlet.

The path to healing and well-being is rarely linear, with many of the young people Seneca serves facing setbacks even as they make progress toward their individual goals. Casey’s resilience in the face of adversity and loss is truly inspiring. Casey is now preparing to step down to a lower level of service due to the progress he has made towards his goals, a testament to his tremendous growth.
AMIR'S STORY

Maya Angelou Academy serves children who have been expelled from multiple preschools and with families who struggle financially and personally. Many of our students carry generations of systemic trauma and mistreatment. This year we have been incredibly lucky to offer the most specialized programming we ever have.

Four-year-old Amir was one of our returning students and had built a strong reputation as one of the funniest, most energetic, and passionate children. He typically vacillated between telling funny stories and being pushed to aggression when upset. Unfortunately, almost everything made him upset and scared. Having had trusted adults abruptly leave him in the past, his teacher leaving the room briefly caused panic and fear. His difficulty calming himself because of his early childhood trauma frequently manifested as hitting and kicking other students even when they just touched something he wanted to use. This all posed significant challenges, and dangers, to staff.

This year he had a teacher with specialized training in early childhood mental health, one highly motivated counselor who loves engaging students in physical activity and sports and one counselor with her master’s in dance movement therapy, a classroom art therapist and an occupational therapist consultant. Each week, Amir and his classmates participated in movement group, sensory group, and art therapy in addition to having a full-day focus on movement-based self-regulation and mental health.

Through diligent work, the team created specialized plans for him. He sat in a rocking chair for table activities allowing him to move as much as he needed, he had a place on his desk to display all of his earned stickers proudly. With encouragement from his father and grandmother, he practiced his letters and numbers at school and home. Most importantly, he was consistently treated with respect and his difficult behaviors were seen as communication of feelings rather than his lack of trying. By the end of the year, Amir was the student who joyfully welcomed new students to the classroom and showed them around. He has built relationships with adults and older students all around the school, getting a chance to show off his new social skills and tell his jokes.

His story illustrates the very best of what our teams can do when partnered whole heartedly with children and families. Amir excitedly went off to kindergarten at his beloved older brother’s school, back to his home district. He’s missed but his legacy of dancing, joking, and driving incredible team collaboration is ever present!
THE POWER OF TRAINING

Seneca’s Institute for Advanced Practice (SIAP) provided training for our 1400 staff and over 100 community partner agencies in 2019. SIAP’s trainings for providers in the Child Welfare, Juvenile Justice, and Mental Health systems provide education on best and emerging practices to ensure high quality service provision for the youth we serve. SIAP provided over 4552 hours of training in 2019 through our IV-E contracts, and even more funded by programs and other resources.

In 2019 SIAP has continued our 2018 goal of increasing our offering of trainings related to matters of power and privilege in our work with diverse populations. To advance this goal, SIAP added a number of new trainers with exciting new trainings. Here is a small sample of the trainings SIAP offered this year:

- Impact of Immigration
- Creating Affirming Environments of Care for Trans and Queer Youth
- Conscious Nonviolent Parenting: Strengthening Empathy and Resiliency in a Complex Culturally Pluralistic Society with Heightened Focus on African Ancestried Families
- Social Emotional Role of Fathers
- Disrupting the School to Prison Pipeline to Improve Outcomes for Youth
- Restorative Practices: Reflecting on Cross-Cultural Masculinity in Social Services
- Understanding the Biracial/Multiracial Experience in Order to Better Serve Youth and Families

SIAP has also continued our initiative to expand the reach of our trainings outside of the San Francisco Bay Area. Our second Training for Trainers (T4T) included trainers from Los Angeles, Orange, and Ventura Counties, as well as Washington state, enabling these trainers to bring back valuable trainings to our staff and community partners in those regions. Seneca also became NASW-WA certified to provide continuing education units in Washington state this year, enabling our clinicians there to use the rich Seneca trainings they attend to obtain and renew their clinical licenses.

In December of 2019, SIAP moved to Seneca’s new Golf Links Road location. In addition to two training spaces in which SIAP will provide New Employee Orientation and the other trainings that our staff and community partners have come to rely on, the Golf Links Road campus has a large training space that allows trainings of up to 120 participants. This exciting new space will allow more service providers to benefit from our larger trainings, such as our 2019 offering of Dr. Kenneth Hardy’s Understanding and Addressing Racial Trauma, which was able to hold 114 participants.

DIVERSITY, EQUITY, AND INCLUSION
Diversity, Equity and Inclusion at Seneca has continued to grow with various efforts expanding in all regions and departments throughout the agency. We expanded our ability to provide linguistically appropriate services to our Spanish speaking youth and families. We increased our internal capacity to translate documents from English into Spanish. Our language services staff translated more than 350 documents ensuring that our Spanish speaking families had treatment plans, consent documents, as well as brochures in their native language. We have seen multiple opportunities for staff to participate in regional advisory boards, trainings, language practice groups and Employee Resource Groups for African American/Black, Asian-American Pacific Islander, Latinx, LGBTQIA+, and Bilingual speaking identified persons. We also offered employees, who self-identify with having white privilege, a professional learning community to explore and discuss concepts including racial equity and white identity development within the context of our workplace and the youth and families we serve. Seneca’s journey and commitment to becoming a more diverse, equitable and inclusive organization continues...
KAISER PERMANENTE

Seneca Family of Agencies is profoundly grateful to Kaiser Permanente for their generous support over the past year. Their unshakable commitment to advancing the wellbeing of children and families has made them an invaluable partner in Seneca’s work. All told: grants, sponsorships and volunteer support from Kaiser Permanente in 2019 directly touched 2,500 lives, enabling Seneca to:

- Re-create (and expand) our highly successful Health and Wellness Expo for the third year in a row, engaging hundreds of community members of all ages in free wellness services. The Expo provided Bay Area families with access to community resources, mental and physical health education, exposure to community-based organizations, and most importantly, fun.

- Offer two internships to young people through our Solano Transition-Aged Youth program. Interns have supported their peers served by the program by providing advocacy, community resource linkage, and group services co-facilitation. In addition to constituting an unparalleled opportunity for youth to gain experience and skills in the mental health and social services setting, the internships have served as a platform for youth to provide direct feedback to programs region-wide on how best to engage young people and improve services.

- Build a Thrive Sensory Room for students served at Building Blocks Therapeutic Preschool and Maya Angelou Academy in Oakland. Due to experiences of trauma and adversity, students at Building Blocks and Maya Angelou face challenges with self-regulation, social skills, and learning. Because the areas in the brain most affected by early trauma are those responsible for regulating the body, the Thrive Room’s equipment for students to climb, jump, crawl, and balance plays a crucial supportive role in building students’ self-regulation and de-escalation skills. These movements support the calming of the nervous system and allow children to refocus and feel safe at school.

- Provide Trauma-Informed Education at Hayward High. This project works to foster a trauma-informed school culture and climate in which all students and staff are supported to thrive, on and off campus. Seneca’s on-site clinician provides psychoeducation, community resources, and case management to students and trauma-informed practices training and coaching to faculty, administrators, and other school staff.

Seneca’s broad continuum of care would not be possible without the generous support of donors, corporate partners, and foundations. We continue to be humbled and thankful for the many creative ways that partners like Kaiser Permanente find to strengthen the impact and expand the reach of our programs. Thank you, Kaiser Permanente, for sharing in our vision to provide Unconditional Care to children and families!
